Twelve Love Affairs

I propose to have twelve love affairs in 1964.

Falling in love with January, I am told, especially by eastern friends, is a hard thing to do in Winnipeg, where the corner of Portage and Main holds the world record for ear-nipping. I have managed it, however; and anyhow, it seems to me the wind that whistles around Dominion Square in Montreal, is more bone-chilling than any Manitoba wind.

It doesn't make sense, but I adore February because it means January—which I loved so much—is over. That's fickle, but true.

March finds me madly in love with its promise of April. By the 28th I'm at the gig-gly state—and when April, almost unbelievably, arrives, I'm love-crazed for sure. Let's not go through May to November or I'll get nauseatingly maudlin.

But good old December—there's the month that makes the heart throb.

Any month that can hand you so many bills and expenses but hold your love is really something. No other province in Canada puts on the show December does in Manitoba.

Hoar frost takes crooked old maples and makes well-dressed Christmas trees out of them. Even country towns get so carried away they string colored lights everywhere, and Winnipeg, brightly-lit at all times, makes every boulevard a showplace in December.

Just to be alive here in Canada in December is worth a lot. It's a land of freedom, fat turkeys and good pay cheques. Those of us who have the good pay cheques and the fat turkeys ought to remember, though, that in spite of general affluence, there are some who must live on all-too-slim rations—and that's a bitter lot indeed when they see everyone else so well fixed.

To be poor in a land of plenty is worse than being poor in lands where your neighbors are in the same sad situation. So it is a time when most of us should loosen up a little more when The Salvation Army rings its bells along the street or comes carol singing at the door, for The Army goes wherever there is need. And not with food and clothing alone, but with a message of hope, and hand-shakes warm with real friendship.

Merry Christmas, and Happy New Year, everybody, and God bless us, every one!

MESSER'S BACK!

Drumming in another season of Don Messer's "down east" music on the CBC radio network are Marg Osburne, Don (centre), and Charlie Chamberlain. The group, which began its CBC radio career in 1939 as the New Brunswick Lumberjacks, is heard Wednesdays and Fridays. Announcer on the show is popular Don Tremaine.

Many Practical Ways To Heat Extra Room

The attic is one of the most flexible areas in the house. It can be remodelled into a bedroom, a den, an upstairs family room or even an efficient apartment.

Today there are many ways to heat the attic. The following are some of the methods used:

A space heater can be simply set on the attic floor. Space heaters use either gas, oil, kerosene or electricity. They are frequently the least expensive heating equipment to install, but they are not always economical to operate. Moreover, heat is usually concentrated in one spot around the heater.

Electric resistance baseboard units are relatively inexpensive and easy to install, and they provide more uniform heating than space heaters. Operating costs, however, usually run three to four times higher with this type of unit except in a few areas where electric rates are extremely low.

To maintain heating efficiency with electric units, heavy insulation is recommended for attic walls and ceiling. Cost of this extra installation often offsets the savings in the cost of equipment. Caution, usually required is 220 volt.

Expanding your existing central heating system is another way to heat the attic. This should be done with the advice of a reliable heating contractor, who can tell whether your heating plant is large enough to handle the extra heating load. Expanding your heating system should provide the finest heating if the heating plant is properly installed.

You will probably have fewer problems expanding your heating system if it is a hydronic (modern hot water heating) system. According to the National Better Heating-Cooling Council a properly installed hydronic system is possible without extensive alterations to the system.

A separate heating system can also be installed just to heat the attic. This system uses a small hydronic boiler which is sized for one-room heating jobs. A small, silent pump is used to convey heated water from the boiler through finger-like tubing to hydronic baseboard heating panels.

large windows with a single pane. It should be cut one-eighth to three-sixteenths inches smaller than the actual opening to allow for sash irregularities, expansion and even stresses.

4. Apply a cushion of putty to the groove of the sash before inserting the glass. This will help insure a good, weather-tight seal when the glass is set and prevent water and air leakage around the pane.

5. Press the new glass gently but firmly into place in the putty cushion. Holding it in place, press or drive the glazier's points into the wood using the side of a screw driver or chisel. Three or four points to a side are sufficient to hold larger panes, two on smaller ones.

6. Roll putty to pencil thickness and lay the rolls end to end around the sides of the sash. Press it firmly in place, smoothing it with a putty knife to form a triangular bevel between sash edge and glass. Be sure putty doesn't extend above the frame on the opposite side of the glass and is parallel with it.

7. A light application of water with a soft paint brush will remove putty streaks from the glass, or if you prefer, allow putty to dry a day or two and clean smudges with turpentine.

Mr. T. Holstead,
Coleman Journal,
Coleman, Alberta.

Dear Tom:

Thanks ever so much for sending The Coleman Journal to me while I was a patient in the Col. Belcher Hospital, and now here is my new address where I hope to make my home. This place is lovely and everyone is so nice and kind and seem not to be able to do enough for us to make us happy and comfortable.

I've got lots to be thankful for, and now with The Coleman Journal al coming with all the home town news, what more could I wish for, so am enclosing a Postal Order for a subscription to The Journal. Remember me to all the boys who, I hope, are all in good health as I am at present, and I wish you all a "Merry Christmas" and a "Happy New Year".

Yours truly,
E. C. (Bud) Clarke.
